The territory in Roman Times

Most of the evidence of the Roman period (fig. 1) is concentrated in the urban centre of Forum Traiani (fig. 2). But in the vicinity, though not really close, two milestones from the Roman road going from Turris Libisonis to Forum Traiani were found. From there the road continued towards Uselis and then Karalis.

Fig. 2 - The territory of Fordongianus highlighting the most important sites
(from Google Earth; reworked by C. Tronchetti).

They also found milestones belonging to other roads. Stretches of road were found near to the bridge over the Tirso; as were the remains of an aqueduct. Remains of urban roads and residential buildings (fig. 3) have also been identified here and there in the present town centre. At the start of the last century, some isolated tombs were found in the surrounding areas.
